

Are you interested in real-world evidence generation to advance diabetes care in the era of emerging diabetes technology?

Join Our Improving Diabetes Quality Initiative!

Beyond Type 1 (BT1) and the Association of Diabetes Care & Education Specialists (ADCES), with support from Abbott Laboratories and Avalere Health, launched the Improving Diabetes Quality Initiative (iDQI), a national effort to improve diabetes care in the era of emerging diabetes technologies.

iDQI is preparing to test three CGM-related quality measures and pilot quality improvement interventions to improve diabetes care. This effort aims to develop standardized quality measures that account for digital technology in diabetes management and generate evidence on improving quality of care.

Why Participate in the iDQI?

If you are receiving this email, your organization has been identified by the iDQI Leadership Team as a thought leader, innovator, and potential partner. As part of the iDQI Corporate Roundtable, you will:

- Support an aligned vision for advancing diabetes technology and care and contribute to long-lasting thought leadership
- Provide suggestions on measure testing objectives, pilot design, and external dissemination strategies
- Collaborate directly and indirectly with CMS and other healthcare stakeholders to create dialogue around quality measures and shape the future of quality measurement
- Gain visibility into evidence generation results, technical expert panel, and advisory committee expert input

Objectives

Overall, you can expect an:

- Introduction to the iDQI and our vision for 2023-2024
- Overview of ways to get involved with the iDQI

A detailed agenda is attached to the invite.

Mission

Our mission is to improve the quality of diabetes care in an era of emerging diabetes technologies and changing consumer preferences.

Vision

We envision a cohesive diabetes community united in advancing evidence-based, high-quality, patient-driven, and equitable diabetes care.

If you have any further questions about the iDQI, please email Naila Wahid at NWahid@avalere.com.

About iDQI

In 2021, Beyond Type 1 (BT1) and the Association of Diabetes Care and Education Specialists (ADCES) launched Improving Diabetes Quality Initiative (iDQI) to advance the quality of diabetes care in the era of CGM by establishing CGM-related quality measures. This effort, with support of Abbott, is managed by Avalere Health. The initiative builds upon efforts in 2018 to understand the landscape of diabetes care, how to leverage CGM data, and the need for better quality measures.
